

Fascination "puddle"

Puddles have a magical attraction for children. It is almost impossible for a child to walk past a reflecting puddle without being at least very interested in it.

Juhu, it was raining and rainwater had collected in some places in the garden!

The puddle is about to be discovered - with rubber boots, an excavator and a boat.

There is still a puddle on the corner of the house.

But the next day is the puddle gone and everyone is sad or astonished where the puddle stayed is.

That's why we do it ourselves a puddle.

The children always run in the Circle, into the puddle and out again.

After a few days the puddle is gone again.

"Where's the water gone?"
"Into the earth."

Is it in the gutter?

A child suspects that the water is in the walls.

"Up there."

It was raining again and there's a big deep puddle,

that the kids can jump into.

They got sticks
and stird about the mud.

From jumping in a lot
is almost only mud remained.
